Lingerie Frock of Tucks and Insertion.

Never are empire lines more beautiful than when serving as a foundation for one of the sheer lingerie frocks. Batiste seems to be the favorite material for these gowns, for, while soft and fine, it has sufficient body to impart that crisp freshness necessary to a dainty summer toilet. This material was used for the gown shown here, combined with bands of val lace insertion in two widths. The yoke and collar were formed of strips of the material, fagoted together in a graceful design. Bands of pin tucks were set between the strips of narrow insertion on bodice, sleeves and skirt, the latter being extremely long and clinging.

CLEANING AND DYEING YOUR OLD CLOTHING

Simple Suggestions That Any One Can Follow
Successfully at Home.

Thrifty mothers and housekeepers who are now repairing old wearing apparel will doubtless find the linen dress that has iron rust or other stains that did not appear when the garment was stored away, a straw hat that looked stylish when packed into its box, but now seems out of date, and many small articles, such as ribbons, laces, feathers, flowers, etc., that when treated to the "dye pot" will be as pretty as when new if directions on the "dyes" are carefully followed by amateurs.

Take, for instance, white and delicately colored wash dresses. If before subjecting them to the dye bath stains or spots are cleaned the coloring will be a success; otherwise a hole or a worse marring may result.

For removing wine, ink, fruit or grass stains, try glycerine and alcohol in equal parts. If they fail to respond, then in the case of white goods javic water may be resorted to. If colored goods so stained are dyed then they may be cleaned in javic water, but not otherwise, as the water takes out color. Rust spots will disappear in a solution of one part acetic acid to twenty parts water, rinsing afterward in warm water.

An iodine stain will often respond to sponging with pure alcohol, while rusted parts should be covered with a paste made from raw starch and exposed to the sun for a day. Then the paste must be brushed off and the spot washed with warm water and soap.

For tar spots apply turpentine. Then place the soiled goods between blotters and press with a hot iron. Repeat until the stain disappears, then wash first with turpentine and afterward with soap and water.

To take out wagon grease, which is of two kinds, that made from coal tar may be removed from cloth by an application of petroleum; the other, from animal fat, responds to a sponging with ether.

For paint and varnish stains use fusel oil. Old perspiration stains may be removed by applying oxalic acid in solution one part to twenty parts water.

The authority responsible for the above also adds this:

"In following these various directions it should be remembered that rubbing roughens the material and this should not be done, especially when the fabric is to be dyed. The gentle dabbing on of the solvent with the use of a clean cloth is sufficient."

Prevent Stains From Spreading.

It is a mistake to spread stains by the careless use of remedies, and to prevent this catastrophe a good plan, and one which prevents things from forming, is to place a clean white blotter under the spot before applying the solvent.

Silks should be cleaned with great care, as the colors are very easily affected. If, however, in the process of removing the stain the color becomes lighter, it can generally be restored by touching lightly with white lead.

Now that colors are worn so much, it will be wise to dye last summer's faded frocks a brighter color, or to put discolored white goods through the same process, for in this way one can get practically a new dress at very little expense.

Now that one dye can be bought for coloring every kind of fabric, the chance of failure is much lessened, and certainly the process is simple.

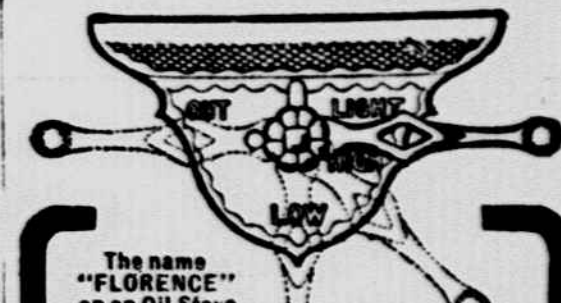

Full directions are printed on each package, yet in spite of this women are apt to try experiments. A case is known where a dress was dyed a deep, rich, glossy black, and so the operator put double the amount of dye required into the bath, with the result that the goods turned a bronze brown.

By repeated washings in ammonia and warm water the brown shade disappeared and the fabric became black. This is cited as a caution against over dyeing.

Linen Difficult to Color.
In dyeing linen and cotton goods it should be remembered that the former is harder and tougher than the cotton, therefore in order to get the best results it should be allowed to boil longer.

Cotton and mixed goods will, as a rule, be a greater success if allowed to cool in the bath before being rinsed, unless only a delicate tint is desired.

Another mistake made sometimes by the amateur dyer is to imagine that any colored background will take any shade desired. This is not so. For instance, a woman has a yellow dress which she decides to dye blue. She buys blue dye of course, but the result after the operation is a green fabric. Space prevents giving a table of colors for guidance. It can only be stated that rose, pink, light blue, cream and white will take any color.

GEN. BOOTH ISSUES ADDRESS

REPLIES TO SCORES OF CONGRATULATORY TELEGRAMS.

Head of Salvation Army Will Celebrate Eightieth Birthday Anniversary Next Saturday.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Gen. William Booth, whose eightieth birthday anniversary is to be celebrated throughout the world next Saturday, has replied to the scores of congratulatory cablegrams already received from state governors, mayors of leading American cities and other men of prominence, with a message to the American people. The message was given out at the American headquarters of the Salvation Army here yesterday and is as follows:

"After spending eighty years in this world with almost countless opportunities for observing the purposes for which men generally live and the disappointments they so commonly suffer, it seems reasonable that I should have formed some opinion as to the course they ought to follow if they are to have any real success."

"So on this my eightieth birthday I tell the American people this: If they will seek the honor of God, the reign of righteousness, the welfare of the friendless poor, the riches that endure forever, with the same self-sacrificing activity with which they seek the wealth and pleasure of this world, they will have a good chance of finding that life of satisfaction which now so often eludes them and of building up a nation for the world to imitate."

"WILLIAM BOOTH, General."

WESTMINSTER, Md., April 5.—Mrs. Charlotte Virginia Yingling, wife of Michael Yingling, is dead at her home on East Green street, this city, in her seventy-sixth year. She leaves two brothers, Albert Gearty of Baltimore, and Milton Gearty of Union Bridge.

Church for the ensuing year, has resigned as pastor of that church and will become pastor of the M. E. Church at East Worcester, N.
